

Awakened by your absence the tides begin to shift glimpses of your hem hang haloed in gold toned hues revealed in the nights waiting the archers bow it lifts and a long since seen smile returns to heaven's muse

A cheshire grins widens shinning white with pearly teeth passions pursed lips pursue purity as it ripens 'til a half filled cauldron the sky kindly bequeaths and darkness wanes as the oracular eye widens drawing nearer you silently reflect all light fading stars herald your orb as it so brightly gleams defined in the darkness you return to me my sight and dusk dawns illuminated invoking clear dreams

Your big belly glows with a golden ripeness that shines Waxed into fullness your potential powerfully peaks Energy culminates and descends down every spine Your dwindling wholeness a volume it silently speaks as a curious cats pupil purposefully stares while the twilights last gleaming is slightly over shown the pitch black reaches back yet theres still faint light to spare just as the stars are revealed more than they're ever known divided and mirrored in dualistic intent emanations sinking as you fade to a dull dip bearing a basket revealing all it once had spent as your smile smirks at the world from ink coated lips grandmother you rest with tired wisdom in your eyes you bring visions of the return with thoughts cold and clear a light lingering line in the most sullen of skies till once again you wink and finally disappear